LCV OPERATORS - HOW TO SAVE PETROL AND DIESEL COSTS – FOR THE LONG-TERM

Abbey, one of the UK's leading commercial fuelcard providers, says that companies operating LCV fleets and who are still relying on outdated systems of fuel purchase – such as 'pay-and-reclaim', company credit cards, or depot tanks – are almost certainly paying more than they need for fuel. They're also incurring a lot of unnecessary hidden costs because of the administrative burden involved.

According to Abbey, these companies could enjoy substantial savings off their fuel bills and administrative costs by giving their drivers the Abbey fastfuel fuelcard. This applies equally to mixed fleets of petrol and diesel vehicles, as well as to diesel-only fleets, because fastfuel is the only UK fuelcard that ensures lower prices for both petrol and diesel purchases.

It is accepted at over 1400 Texaco service stations on major trunk routes and urban fringes nationwide, as well as 267 Morrisons Superstores. Every week, member companies receive advance notification from Abbey what the price per litre will be for each fuel for the next 7-day period at all Texaco sites, regardless of the prices on the pumps. This is typically 2-3 pence below the national average pump price – and can represent a substantial annual saving. There's no advance bulk purchase necessary, no cash involved on the road, and all transaction details are automatically recorded. Weekly invoices are fully itemised and payable by automatic direct debit 14 days later. Abbey also provides regular customised reports and analyses of fuel purchase and consumption without extra charge and without the need for significant internal administration time.
